

Distributor AI Development Program

Course Agenda: February 11th-12th, 2026

Executive Summary:

The Distributor AI Development Program is designed to equip members with conversational competence in AI and inspire practical applications within distribution.

The curriculum is developed in collaboration with Villanova Executive MBA instructors who have expanded their specialization to Artificial Intelligence. The course was originally introduced in the CIDL's Leadership Experience program and the cohort encouraged making the course available as a standalone opportunity to help members enhance their AI strategy and utilization.

Learning Objectives:

- Innovation – Building a Resilient Business Model
- AI Landscape – Models, Tools, and Agents
- AI Utility – Security, Policy, and Prompting Best Practices
- AI Application – Distributor Specific Use Cases

The course explores the strategic role of innovation in building a resilient business model – fostering a mindset and culture that enables embracing AI for long-term success. From there, participants develop a working understanding of AI models and gain hands-on experience in crafting high-quality prompts to maximize utility. Applying these insights, participants will tackle real-world distribution challenges, including developing marketing and business plans. The course provides insights into AI use cases across key distribution functions, ensuring you leave with actionable strategies for your organization.
